

The History of Peach State Federal Credit Union

1961 | October

- The founding members – James Shewmake, Irving Levy, Adrin Staton, Lyle Coker, B.B. Harris, Crawford Puckett, Henry Boddie – met at Mr. Shewmake's house to formalize the credit union. They were all employed by Gwinnett County School System. They were a group of friends who decided the teachers of Gwinnett County School System needed a credit union.
- The credit union was named Gwinnett Teachers Federal Credit Union, but according to the charter, membership was open to all employees of the school system.
- The founding members served as the credit union's first Board of Directors.
- For the first several years, the credit union only offered members a savings account.
- At this time, the credit union had no brick and mortar office. Each member's record was kept in a manila folder and the files were stored in a cardboard box.
- Mr. Levy served as Treasurer. Once a month he would drive around to the schools to visit the members. It was a cash operation – a member would make a deposit, the money would go into the box and the transaction was hand recorded. When he drove around, he would also collect payments for signature loans.

1966 | September

- Gwinnett County School System's Board voted to approve payroll deductions.
- At this time, the credit union had 91 members and $20,687.97 in total assets.

1967 | October

- The credit union moved their operation from a cardboard box in the back of a car to a closet in Central Gwinnett Vocational School. Dr. Richard Johnson was an advocate for the credit union, working with the school system to acquire this space, which was in Howard Maxwell's office. He was the Director of the Gwinnett County Vocational School.
- Elizabeth McElhanon started to work in the school system and began to do volunteer work for the credit union.

1973 | September

- The credit union moved to the Hooper Renwick Service Center. The Gwinnett County Board of Education gave the credit union office space in this building free of charge.
- Kathleen Bolton worked for Gwinnett County School Superintendent J. W. Benefield. Upon her retirement, she came to work for the credit union part-time and became the first paid employee. She worked for the credit union for about a year.

1973 | October

- Peggy Kilgroe joined the credit union as the first full-time, paid employee.
- All bookkeeping was recorded in pen and ink.
- The credit union opened accounts at First National Bank of Lawrenceville and Trust Company to store the members' money.
- Members were charged $0.25 to open an account.

- Nathan Smelley served as the Board's Secretary and performed the credit union's internal audit.
- Ms. Kilgroe would visit Gwinnett County's schools and sit in the teachers' work room to sign up members.
- The Board decided the credit union should pay dividends to the members twice a year. Up until this point, dividends had been paid once a year.

1974

- Ms. McElhanon served as the credit union's Supervisory Committee. In this capacity, she was responsible for reconciling the credit union's quarterly bank statements. She did this until 1980, at which time a third party was hired to conduct audits.

1979 | November

- The credit union moved to 286 Crogan Street in Lawrenceville, which was a rental property.
- Stock in Users Data Processing was purchased by the credit union, allowing members to receive quarterly statements.
- Ms. Kilgroe was the only employee that used the data processing system. Ms. McElhanon, still an unpaid volunteer, was trained as her backup. At this time, the only other help Ms. Kilgroe had in running the credit union was from a part-time student.
- Dividends were now paid to members on a quarterly basis.

1981 | March

- The credit union reached $1 million in total assets.

1983 | October

- The credit union reached $2 million in total assets.
